

ABSTRACT

Systems, including computer program products, and methods for career planning are described. The techniques described include storing a set of roles for an organization, storing user information for a user, the user information including a first role and a second, later role,
5 and automatically generating a career path based on the set of roles, the first role, and the second role.

20740565.doc